Mrs. Blum's Demand for $50 a Week Alimony Draws Forth a Catalogue of the Alleged Grievances of Her Tailor, Who Loves Her Still, Despite Cold Dinners.

"The only real trouble between me and my wife," says Jacob Blum, a tailor in West 125th street, in reply to Mrs. Blum's charges of cruelty and desertion, "is that she would not bother to give me decent meals when I got home late after a hard day's work. Cold sausages or delicatessen meats were good enough for me in her opinion. I didn't think so and used to tell her so. Besides, she didn't behave when away from home in a manner befitting a good woman, wife or mother." Mrs. Blum, who married the tailor on June 12, 1900, wants a separation with alimony. She complains that her husband, though refusing to take her to the theatre or other places of amusement or allowing her to go away for the summer, spent large sums drinking and carousing, rarely coming home before midnight. Besides, she says, he abused her continually and wound up by offering her $3,000 if she would consent to a divorce.

Blum denies all these allegations. He says that, far from having no summer vacations, his wife went away for four weeks within a month of their marriage and did not appear to be very enthusiastic when he ran down to see her from Saturday to Monday. He says that his business compels him to stay at his store from early morning until late at night, save for an hour at noon for lunch. But when he got home, after 9, his wife was generally out, and there was nothing to eat but cold

When he complained, he says, she called him "a coward, born of a pig family." "Anyway," she would tell him, "anything is good enough for a Hungarian." If he way," she would tell him, "anything is good enough for a Hungarian." If he didn't like it, he knew what he could do. So Blum went to bed hungry, save on Saturday nights, when he supped at some restaurant near the shop. "Carousing!" exclaims Blum. "All I ever spent carousing was about 45 cents for my lunch or supper exclaims Blum. "All I ever spent carousing was about 45 cents for my lunch or supper and 10 cents for two glasses of beer a day."

Concerning his wife's summers, Blum goes into details. In 1900, their marriage year, she spent a month at Bath Beach; in 1901, five weeks at Rockaway, where, he says, she told him that he was a disgrace to her and she wished he would stay at home. The following year she went to Spring Valley for six weeks. He went up one Saturday and found her dressed up in men's clothes and posing as the bridegroom in a mock marriage ceremony.

In 1903 Mrs. Blum spent six weeks at Mountaindale, and her tailor spouse learned that, "just for a good joke," as she explained, she had gone to the room of a male guest, carrying a lay figure of a woman, and, while the unconscious male slept, she d laid the lay figure beside him, beneath the bedclothes.

While Blum was there a ball was given, While Blum was there a ball was given, at which his wife astonished him by giving an exhibition of high hat kicking on the ballroom floor, amid applause. He remonstrated, and forbade her to go on so, he says; but she told him that he could go home, she was in the country for pleasure, and was going to get all the fun she could So Blum went to bed at 11 o'clock that night, with their baby child. His wife came home at 3 in the morning, and by sunrise Blum had started back for New York.

came home at 3 in the morning, and by sunrise Blum had started back for New York.

This year, because of the visits to this city of two brothers, Blum said, he begged his wife to stay home. But she packed off to Green Field for a week, then to Mountaindale for a week, and the rest of the summer she spent in three and four day visits to her sister at Bayonne. While on one of these trips, he says, she dressed herself up "like a woman of fashion," and imitated a flirtation scene, "going through various lewd and objectionable motions and making herself vulgarly conspicuous."

Finally on Sept. 7 last, she left him, taking the child with her. When Blum came home to lunch that day at his home, 2 East 117th street, he found their apartment rancacked of everything save the carpets and heavy furniture. Dishes, linens, crookery, pictures, clothing, everything movable had gone away in an express wagon.

But Blum still loves her, and for the sake of their child he is willing to "forget and forgive" if she will only come back with the baby. But he says he cannot afford to pay her the $50 a week alimony that she wants the courts to allow her.

HAD MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE Actress Claiming Morris Estate, However,

Wouldn't Show It in Court. WALLINGFORD, Conn., Oct. 17.-Judge W. C. Northrup in the Probate Court here to-day dismissed the case brought by Miss Dunn, the actress, to get possession of the estate of Clifton J. Morse. She says that she was married to Mr. Morse in January, 1904, in New York city, but has refused to show the members of her alleged husband's family the proofs of the marriage.

Attorney William H. Ely, coursel for the family of Mr. Morse, and the actress the family of Mr. Morse, and the actress began a lively war of words as soon as court opened, during which the lie was passed. The woman conducted her own case and when it was dismissed entered an appeal on her own behalf to the Superior Court. She first insisted upon the trial being postponed until afternoon, as see aid her lawyer had lost his train and couldn't arrive till then. Attorney Ely said:

"I don't know about your statements.
You know that you admit that you came into my office and told me a lie." "Well," retorted the woman, "you handed me out a few yours if."

Judge Northrup announced, after the court adjourned, that the woman had shown him a wedding certificate, and that it was signed by the Rev. George O. Houghton, pastor of the "Little Church Around the Corner," New York, who swore that he performed the ceremony in his parlors on BRIDEGROOM IN A CELL. ding Feast From Hall.

Castante Terrokwitch of 128 Grand street and William Pierz of 433 Sixth street were in the Yorkville police court yesterday on counter complaints. Terrokwitch charged Pierz with disturbing his wedding and Pierz charged Terrokwitch with causing the oss of a $60 diamond pin from his tie.

Terrokwitch was married Sunday night to Annie Turcho of 642 East Twelfth street, and a wedding party was held in Dintenfass Hall at 183 Second street. The members of the party were dancing when Pierz entered the hall. He was not invited but he was made welcome was not invited but he was made welcome and asked to drink to the happiness of the wedded couple. He did so until the many toasts made him bold and he seized Bertha Deutsch, the bridesmaid, and hugged her so violently that he was in danger of dislocating her neck. Then the bride called on the groom to throw the uninvited guest out of the hall.

The groom, with the assistance of the best man, did so and there was a scuffie in the corridor. Detective Ernst came along and took the groom and Pierz to the Fifth street station. The bride also went to the station and wanted to be locked up in the same cell with her husband, who had a home prepared for her at 105 Seventh street. The sergeant compromised by allowing her stay in the back room, and accommodating cops carried occasional messages from bride to groom.

The two prisoners agreed to withdraw their complaints in court, so Magistrate Ommen discharged them.

WANT ENGINE FOR PROTECTORY. Six Hundred Boys There and Nearest Firemen a Mile Away.

Brother Henry, the manager of the Fire Headquarters yesterday to urge Commissioner Hayes to establish an engine company and a truck company near the protectory. He was accompanied by several Catholic clergymen and a number of residents of Westchester.

Brother Henry said that there were usually about six hundred boys in the protectory, that the nearest engine house was more than a mile away, and that better fire protection was necessary. He offered to give land now owned by the protectory to the city on which to put the engine house.

Commissioner Hayes replied that his appropriation would not permit him to organize the company. He offered to supply the necessary apparatus, however, if the Westchester reople would organize the company. Brother Henry said he would consider the proposition. would consider the proposition.

WATERSHED TOO MUCH TO BUY. Mayor Thinks the Condition Satisfactory

on the Whole-Nuisance Industry. Speaking of his inspection of the Croton watershed on Saturday, Mayor McClellan said vesterday:

said yesterday:

There are many places where nuisances are within reach of the supply. Under the old law the city had power to take such land and to settle the damage by assessment later. The repeal of that law put the city in the same position to water lands that it is in respect to other land. It is necessary to take the usual course of condemnation proceedings. It simost seems as if the establishment of nuisances along the water line has come to be a recognized industry in Westchester county. Several persons have been indicted for maintaining nuisances likely to conteminate the water supply but no one has ever been convicted. It is necessary to buy them off through condemnation proceedings.

The watershed includes more than 300 square miles and it would be impossible for the city to buy it all. The people up there hold even the stoniest and most unproductive of their land at more than $100 an acre.

The Mayor said that on the whole he

SUBWAY TO OPEN AT MIDNIGHT

INVITED GUESTS ONLY TO RIDE BEFORE 12 STRIKES.

Then the Great Public Can Go In at a Nickel a Head-This Is to Avoid a Rush and Accidents Simple Transfer Ceremony at the City Hall in the Afternoon A committee of the Rapid Transit Commission, composed of President Orr, Com-missioners Langdon and Starin, and Chief Engineer Parsons, met John B. McDonald and President Fornes of the Board of Aldermen yesterday and settled upon the details of the celebration on Oct. 27, incident to turning over the West Side line of the sub way to the operating company.

It was decided not to open the road to general business on that day. A large number of invitations to ride in the subway will be issued by the Interborough company and these will be honored at any station from City Hall to 145th street and Broadway. The general public, however, will be barred until midnight of the 27th. Promptly on the stroke of 12 all the stations of the West Side line, except one or two which are not expected to be completed in time, will be thrown open for business and the collection of fares will begin.

The committee decided on this step as was feared that if the subway was opened for business immediately after the celebration the rush to ride would be unprecedented and accidents might result

The formal ceremony will take place in the Aldermen's chamber in the City Hall at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of the 27th. The Mayor will preside. Owing to the limited capacity of the room only invited guests will be admitted. These will include President Roosevelt, the Members of Congress from New York, the State Senators and Assemblymen from the entire city, the heads of departments of the city government, the Judges of all the local courts, the officials of the Board of Trade and of the Chamber of Commerce, the Consuls stationed in this city, Archbishop Farley, Bishop Potter and representatives
